The Ledger says

Ameng all the beautiful and wonderful machinery in the Miss, there is one machine which has not yet been put in operation, that may be termed the very perfection of michinery. It is called the "Moneture Machine," and its object is to determine whether the planchets or pieces of gold or eliver, ready for adjustment and coinage, are of proper weight, or within certain allowed acope of deviation. It accordingly separates them into three divisions, of vight heavy, and light. To accomplish this the machine has five balances or testing instruments, the beam is of the weals form, made and adjusted with great delicacy, but from its center there vises perpendicular at the wire. The planchet is right, there is little or no oscillation, and the piece being pushed off in its turn, fills into a connect which condets it to one of the brass pass below, but if the planchet is heavy, it deaws down the beam and trollers the appropriate wire, so that it touches and sets in motion an apparatus which opens another channel, and so the piece, being pushed off falls into another pan. If the planchet is light, then the apposite side goes down, the upright wire goes over in that direction and moves another channel, and so the piece, being pushed off falls into another pan. If the planchet is labs, carries the 'piece of the brass pan containing the 'hights.' All this being moved by one owner and disposing of 200 pieces per minute, thus doing the work of many hands in the ordinary way. The machine was invented by Seguier, and made by Deleuil, Peris.

which occurred during the representation of a play recently

"The piece was a very successful one, and in one of the scenes lambs played an important part. To give greater effect, the machidest determined to procure and train the genuine article, instead of using dwmb representatives. The animals were trained so that they played their part to a charm in the rehearsals, and at the first performance they formed an exquisitely beautiful group around their corydon, whom they satured with tuneful blessings. The Theatra shook to its foundation with the joud applaine. The applause continued, and the shoep bocame frightened, and popped, shoos sino top stage boxer—these over the foot-lights into the orchestra—and, of course the whols flock followed their leaders. The ladies in the lower shrieked, the orchestra whi mped and halloud to prevent the sheep from tumbing on their violens, the house reased. The sapernumentalism were thrown off after them, but it was an hour before they were caught. The next day they were sent to the shambles."

The Quakers of Long Island and New Jersey we hear are fully aware of the importance of the present election, and will support Fremont for Prisident. In Pennsylvania, they are perhaps still more excopply moved by the great issues which depend on placing in the Executive chair a nan who will set independently of the slave-holding class. They are agreed that the time is come when it is their duty to bear their test much y against a great and grevous wrong, not morely by word of mouth, but at the ballot box, by that expression of it which is the most effectival fall. Rachel Barker, a famous peracher of the Quaker persuasion in Philadelphia, is already to their the assembles. the Quaker persuasion is Philadelpina, is already to ding forth in the assembles of her people ag mat the constitutes committed in the West, and the wickedness of those by whom they are committed or counternanced. A sort of quiet, su idned enthusiasm for the cause of liberty, au dued enthusiasm for the cause of liverty, such as is seemly in the members of that staid and sobe sect, is thus awakened, which will form an important element in our calculations of the probable results of the election. CROFS—WHEAT, OATS, CORN, &c., MALHINE LADOR.—There no longer exists any doubt about crops, every kind, wheat, corn, cais, potatoes, will all be first rate; dly weather has set in, but no possible injury can result from drought, harvest is at the door, and heavier pleces of wheat we have never seen in the country. Oats will be better, if possible, than wheat and had corn come un well it would be a still beavier crop.— De hetter, if possible, than wheat and had corn some up well it would be a still heavier crop.— Farmors must make it a uniform practice to save their seed corn from the field, select it, place it in dry chambers and have it well dried hefore freezing, else there will be partial failures every year. $1,50 per day wages is offered for harvest hands

He always travels in the haggage cars. By doing this he gets rid of two bores, bar-room politicians and concomb-hound to the springs. Mr. Seward is an inveter-ate smeker. By traveling with the haggage he can eajoy this huxury without giving offence to the conductor of the two Miss Glistees, who re-side on the Figh Avenue, New York. The Ran-ater lesits fresh and rigorous, and has a heart which taken to fan with as much sett as it did twenty years ago. Senser Seward him his facilis, her want of obsertainess is not one of them.— "Albeity Times.
